Humane Migration Fence System to be Expanded at IPPE 2015

Cincinnati, OH (January 6, 2015) Vfence LLC, a migration fence manufacturer, expands their product line, Vfence™, at the 2015 International Product and Processing Expo (IPPE) in Atlanta Georgia.

Vfence™ is a cost-effective migration fence that is used in Broiler Houses as a humane way to contain poultry. It came to fruition when a manufacturer of closet shelving discovered their product was being used in Broiler Houses.

“When we looked into what they were doing, we thought, ‘what a great use of our product,’ but why not make it simpler for everyone involved”, stated Jim Kokenge, sales manager for the company.

After introducing their Vfence™ System at last year’s Expo, the company has had great success gaining acceptance within the poultry industry. “We’ve been tested and approved by 10 of the top 20 Integrators and are currently undergoing tests in another 7 of them; it’s been a great year”, added Kokenge, “and we now offer a second height of 14-inches along with the original 11-inches.”

Vfence™ is the only free-standing, ventilated, steel-wire solution specifically designed for use in Broiler Houses that not only benefit the Integrator and Growers, but also improves the humane treatment of the bird itself. According to Kokenge, it’s a win-win-win for everyone; “It’s obvious a ventilated fence improves air circulation allowing for a healthier bird, but why use a product designed for a closet when we can provide one designed specifically for use in a Broiler House. The Integrator gets a healthier bird, the Grower has less labor involved and the equipment distributors no longer have to compete with Home Depot and Lowe’s to supply a great product to their customers.”

Over the years various products have been adapted for use as migration fence such as plywood, corrugated drain pipe and most recently closet shelving, but until now nothing had been used as its design was intended. “It’s such a simple and affordable product. We’re confident that as the Broiler industry continues to see the product for itself, Vfence™ will become the standard in the industry for Migration Fence,” added Kokenge.
